

Robert Rubin is an emeritus professor at NCSU in the biological and agricultural engineering department and a senior environmental scientist with McKim and Creed. From 1999 through 2005 Bob was a visiting scientist at USEPA in the office of wastewater management. He has worked with agricultural producers and processors, wastewater operations, the national biosolids partnership and the division of pollution prevention on a variety of environmental issues including environmental management systems.